ROXBURGHSHIRE.

THIS County, which lies on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded by Northumberland on the east, Dumfriesshire on the south-west, by the county of Selkirk on the west, by Berwickshire on the north, and by Northumberland and part of Cumberland on the south. The area of the shire contains 670 square miles, or 428,494 acres. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the alpine territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situated north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles. In size, Roxburgh is the fourteenth, and in population the seventeenth of the counties of Scotland.

The southern parts of Roxburghshire are very mountainous. The following are the principal mountains and eminences, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Auchopecairn, 2,382; Chill Hill, Millenwood Fells, and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Tudhope Fell, 1,730; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberslaw, 1,392; Eildon Hills, 1,330; Dunnian, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649.

The manufactures of Roxburghshire is that of articles manufactured from wool, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh, and Kelso, where flannels, blankets, tartans, woollen cloth, lambs'-wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively manufactured. The salmon fisheries of the Tweed are of consequence, and yield handsome rents to the proprietors.

The principal railway line in connection with this county is the North British, with its several branches.

The County of Roxburgh comprises thirty entire parishes, and five parts of parishes; it contains only one royal burgh—Jedburgh. The present member for the county is the Earl of Dalkeith. The lord-lieutenant is Lord Reay. Population in 1891 was 53,741.

Including HOBKIRK. KIRKTOWN, MINTO, ROBERTON, TEVIOT HEAD, and WILTON.

HAWICK is a thriving manufacturing town, a parliamentary burgh, and capital of its parish, 50 miles s. by e. from Edinburgh, 20 s.w. from Kelso, 11 s. from Selkirk, and 45 n. from Carlisle, situated on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley branch line of the North British Railway, for which there is a station. The village of WILTON, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included in the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges. The public buildings are the Town Hall, Temperance Hall, Cottage Hospital, and the Exchange. The Town Hall and Municipal Buildings includes Free Library, Reading Room, and a Science and Art Institute and Museum. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock every alternate Monday and Saturday, and special sales during the summer. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, the 21st of September, and the 8th of November. A tryst is likewise held in October, at which horses and cattle are exposed for sale; and there is a wool fair held on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. Population, 19,204.

HAWICK parish comprises an area of 6,112 acres.

HOBKIRK, or HOPEKIRK, is a mountainous parish, 7 miles from Hawick, 11 miles long and about one and a half in breadth; it adjoins the parishes of Cavers, Bedrule, Southdean, Castleton and Kirktown. Acreage 16,193.

KIRKTOWN is a parish 3 miles from Hawick, bounded by Lilliesleaf, Ancrum, Bedrule, Cavers, Wilton, and the County of Selkirk. Acreage, 5,602.

ROBERTON is a parish 5 miles from Hawick. Acreage, 29,419.

WILTON is a parish adjoining Hawick. Acreage, 8,760.

JEDBURGH,

Including BEDRULE, CRAILING, HOWNAM, OXNAM, and SOUTHDEAN.

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the capital of its parish, and the county town; 46 miles S.E. from Edinburgh, 10 S. by W. from Kelso, and 10 N. by E. from Hawick. The lords judiciary hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick, and Selkirk), in April and September; and the Sheriff holds a court on Mondays and Thursdays for the dispatch of civil business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court every Thursday. The justice of peace hold their court on the first Tuesday of every month; and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings, &c., is carried on to a large extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. The market is held on Tuesday. Jedburgh parish comprises an area of 52,535 acres. Population 3,397.

BEDRULE is a parish in the centre of the county, and is distant from Jedburgh about four miles. Acreage, 3,917.

CRAILING is a parish situated  $3\frac{1}{2}$  miles from Jedburgh and  $6\frac{1}{2}$  from Kelso. There are two small villages in the parish, CRAILING and NISBET. The North British Railway has a station at Nisbet. Acreage, 5,966.

HOWNAM is a parish situated among the Cheviot Hills. The village of Hownam is distant from Jedburgh about 9 miles, and from Kelso about 12 miles. Acreage 15,075.

OXNAM is a parish on the borders of Northumberland. The village of Oxnam is 4 miles from Jedburgh, which is the nearest town and railway station. Acreage, 21,160.

SOUTHDEAN is a large parish in the southern part of Teviotdale. Acreage, 27,929.

THIS County lies in the south of Scotland, bounded by Roxburghshire on the east and south-east, on the west by the counties of Dumfries and Peebles, and on the south and south-west by Dumfriesshire. The county extends 27 miles from south-west to north-east, and is  $17\frac{1}{2}$  miles in breadth. Its area is 260 square miles, or 166,524 acres, of which 1997 acres are under water. In size the county stands as the twenty-fourth, and in population the twenty-seventh of the counties of Scotland. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are—Blackhouse Hills, 2,370 feet; Windlestrae Law, 2,295; Law Kneis, 1,900; the Three Brethren, 1,978; Black Andrew, 1,966; Peatlaw, 1,964; Wardlaw, 1,900; Minchmoor, 1,877; Hangingshaw Law, 1,780; and Peatlaw, 1,557.

The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed; the latter valuable river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, during the placid course in a deep channel of nine miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick on Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean.

The Manufactures of this county consists of woollens, tweeds, tartans, shawls, and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins. There are also several engineering and machine making establishments.

The principal railway line with which this county is connected is the North British, and the chief town that lies in its route is Galashiels, and a branch from the main line runs to Selkirk.

The county of Selkirk contains only three complete parishes, namely Ettrick, Stow, and Kirkhope, but has proportions of seven other parochial divisions. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh. This county joins with Peeblesshire in returning one member to Parliament, the present representative being Walter Thorburn, Esq. The lord-lieutenant is Lord Polwarth. Population, 27, 762.

G A L A S H I E L S,

With CADDONFOOT, CLOVENFORDS, and Neighbourhoods.

GALASHIELS is a parliamentary burgh, a manufacturing and market town, 31 miles S.S.E. from Edinburgh, 18 E. from Peebles, 6 N. from Selkirk, 4 N.W. from Melrose, and 30 S. by W. from Berwick, partly in the parish of Galashiels and partly in that of Melrose, situated on both sides of the Gala, about one mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. It lies on the North British Railway, for which line there is a station in the town; there is also a line to Selkirk, and to Edinburgh, Innerleithen, and Peebles. Galashiels has enjoyed an envied distinction in the manufacture of Tweeds. A grain market is held on the Tuesday, a fair on the third Wednesday of March, and a live stock sale is every alternate Wednesday. The parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 8,440. Population 17,252.

CADDONFOOT is a quoad sacra parish (presbytery of Selkirk) in the north-eastern division of the county. It is partly in the civil parish of Yarrow, and partly in those of Galashiels and Stow, and the hamlet of Clovenfords, 3 miles west from Galashiels, being in the latter. Here is a station on the Peebles branch of the North British Railway.

PEEBLESSHIRE.

PEEBLESSHIRE (or TWEEDALE), a county in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfriesshire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures fully thirty miles; from east to west, including the parts on the latter boundary that mingle with Selkirkshire, its breadth is upwards of twenty miles, whilst in other parts it varies from ten to fifteen miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and it comprehends an area of 356 square miles, or 227,869 acres. In size, Peebles is the twenty-third, and in population the thirtieth of the counties of Scotland.

The following are among the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea—Hartfell, 2,916; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gums Cleugh, 2,200: Dundreich, Pykestone, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800: Broughton Heights 1,483; and Meikle, 1,480.

At Peebles, Innerleithen, and Walkerburn, there are mills for the manufacture of tweeds.

The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams: the upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is enriched by many tributaries, and after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manor, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Meggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are abundance of salmon and trout, and a lake, called the West Water Loch, is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The railway from Peebles to Edinburgh is the North British, the one from Symington to Peebles, the Caledonian. There is also a railway to Innerleithen, and a line from thence to Galashiels, and a railway to Linton (properly called West Linton), to distinguish it from East Linton, in Haddingtonshire.

The shire now comprises fourteen parishes, and two parts of parishes; it contains one royal burgh—Peebles—but possesses no representative burgh; the county, in conjunction with Selkirkshire, returns one Member to Parliament, the present member being Walter Thorburn, Esq. Population, 14,279.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LoTHIAN, lies in the south-eastern part of Scotland; bounded on the north by the Firth of Forth, on the east by that Strait, and also by the North Sea, on the south by Berwickshire, and on the west by Edinburghshire, Mid-Lothian; from east to west it extends twenty-six miles; from north to south, at the middle, sixteen—at the east end it is not more than ten miles across, and at the west end about twelve; its surface presents an area of about two hundred and eighty square miles, or 179,142 statute acres. In extent this is the twenty-fourth, and in population the twenty-third of the counties of Scotland.

The greatest elevations in East Lothian above the level of the sea are Traprain Law, 700 feet: North Berwick Law, 940 feet; Soutra Hill, 1230 feet; and Spartleton Hill, 1615 feet.

The manufactures of this county are unimportant, and are carried on but to a limited extent. There are woollen mills in the neighbourhood of the county town, whilst in other parts of the shire are brick and tile works, agricultural implement works, and breweries. Salt is manufactured in the vicinity of Prestonpans, coal also being extensively wrought here and at Tranent, Ormiston, and Pencaitland. The climate in the Lowlands is on the whole genial and favourable for agriculture, whilst in Lammermoor district it is colder, and more liable to falls of rain and snow.

Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay. The shire is destitute of natural lakes, but this deficiency seems no way injurious to the district, and is amply made up by the Firth of Forth, which yields a large supply of fish. The North British Railway passes through the county, and possesses stations in all the principal towns; there are also one or two branches diverging from it.

Haddingtonshire comprises twenty-three complete parishes and two parts of parishes, and three royal burghs—Haddington, Dunbar, and North Berwick. The present member for the county is R. B. Haldane, Esq., Q.C. The Lord-lieutenant of the county is the Earl of Haddington, Population of the county, 37,491.

ABERLADY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THE parish of ABERLADY lies S.E. of the south coast of the mouth of the Frith of Forth. The village is situated 15 miles w. from Edinburgh,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  w.N.W. from Haddington, and  $4\frac{1}{2}$  s. from Dirleton. Acreage, 4319. Population of the parish, 1063, of the village, 501.

ATHELSTANEFORD AND DREM.

ATHELSTANEFORD parish lies on the north-east boundary of Haddington, and is separated on the north by Dirleton from the mouth of the Forth; the small village lies within  $5\frac{1}{2}$  miles S.E. from North Berwick, 5 S.E. from Aberlady, and 3 N.E. from Haddington.

DREM,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  miles distant, is a station on the North British line. It is a village in this parish, the acreage of which is 5,077. Population 745.

BERWICKSHIRE.

THIS is the most south-easterly county of Scotland ; it is bounded on the east by the North Sea, and on the west by the counties of Edinburgh and Selkirk ; on the north by the county of Haddington, and on the south by Northumberland and Roxburghshire. It measures from east to west thirty-five miles, and from north to south twenty-two, and its area comprises 267, 161 statute acres, or 464 square miles. In point of size, Berwick ranks as the twentieth Scottish county.

Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely Merse, Lammermoor and Lauderdale. The Merse is the largest and most valuable district, and embraces that tract of low land between the Lammermoor Hills on the north, and the river Tweed on the south, having Lauderdale for its western boundary. Lammermoor consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres. The district of Lauderdale contains about 67,000 statute acres. The eminences of Berwickshire—those of the greatest altitude above the level of the sea—are Soutra Hill, 1,716 feet ; Crib Law, 1,615 ; Clint Hill ; 1,544 : Meikleless Law, 1,531 ; Tippet Knowes, 1,323 ; Dirrington Law, 1,309 ; and Twin Law, 1,260.

The exports of Berwickshire consist of great quantities of corn, coal, sheep and eggs ; and these indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. Berwickshire is strictly pastoral and agricultural ; the principal crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and turnips, the latter being extensively cultivated. Manufactures finds its chief seat at the principal town, Berwick

The principal lines of railway in this county are the North British and its many branches, and the North-Eastern.

Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town), thirty-three parishes and two parts of parishes ; and contains one royal burgh, Lauderdale-Berwick-upon-Tweed is a royal burgh, and sends one member. The present member for the county is H. J. Tenant, Esq. The lord lieutenant of the county is the Earl of Home. Population, 32,257.
